USPA NEWS - PRESIDENT MACRON FALLS IN SURVEYS DUE TO BENALLA'S CASE BUT NOT ONLY
Regarding polls and the impact of the Benalla Affair on the image of the President, 73% of French believe that the case has tarnished the image of President Macron. Even in the rank of loyal supporters, they are more than half of its voters to feel that this case has had a negative impact on the image of the President of the Republic. This corresponds to the same proportion as during the month of last July. By a very large majority, the French are still shocked by the Benalla affair. Two months after the revelations of the newspaper Le Monde, they are still 74% to declare themselves shocked by the case, reveals a poll "The opinion live" led by the Elabe Institute for BFMTV (*), published this Wednesday. Among them, 40% say they are "very shocked" by the case.
